has been named “Insurance Lawyer of the Year” for the third straight year at the 2019 Benchmark Litigation awards reception in New York City on February 28.

As a leader in the field of insurance recovery litigation, Robin works with an elite group of trial lawyers across offices in New York, California, and Texas. Over the past year, she has notched several important victories for Cohen Ziffer clients, including a unanimous affirming a decision for Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association of America and other related entities, securing over $40 million in coverage from three insurance companies.

Ms. Cohen also served as counsel to Apex Parks Group, which won a Protective Life Insurance Company. Jurors in an Alabama state court found that Protective unjustifiably breached its contract with Apex when it refused to pay death benefits owed under a key man insurance policy issued on the life of Apex’s Chief Executive Officer, Alexander “Al” Weber, Jr., after his untimely death.
