

Corporate Counsel: Apple In-House Attorney Gets Another Bite at Her Old Firm

Jillian Raines left her role at Apple Inc. earlier this year and took a job as a partner at Cohen Ziffer Frenchman & McKenna. She is another in-house attorney from major corporations such as Facebook, Honeywell International Inc. and Goldman Sachs who have left the in-house world to return to private practice.

Following in the footsteps of many in-house attorneys in 2021, Jillian Raines, a former in-house attorney at Apple Inc., has moved to a law firm. She is now a partner at Cohen Ziffer Frenchman & McKenna in New York hoping to leverage her in-house experience for her clients.

Raines, who began working at the firm earlier this month, said the decision to go back to private practice flowed, in part, from the team at Cohen Ziffer. She worked with the firm's founding partners early in her career.
